

Editorial

Biogerontology and biogerontologists

Biogerontology is the study of the biological basis of aging. Biogerontologists are biologists who undertake these kinds of studies, and who no longer need to hide their identities behind any other ‘-logy’.

The journal Biogerontology is, therefore, a brand-new platform for describing the biology of aging, for putting forward bold, innovative, and testable hypotheses for understanding the mechanisms of aging, and for developing efficient strategies for intervention in the process of aging.

Biogerontology brings in the next generation of highly trained and promising biogerontologists as members of the editorial board, while getting all the help, guidance and encouragement from the seniors in the field.

We start this venture with great expectations, confidence and promise. You are invited to join in. Welcome.

Suresh I.S. Rattan, PhD, DSc
Editor-in-Chief

